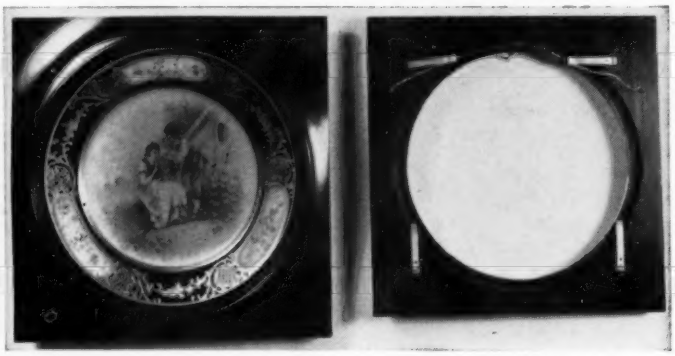
WOODEN PLATE FRAMES



Handsomely made and finished, these beautiful plate frames make wonderful gifts. Hand-made by a skilled craftsman—of fine cabinet wood, stained a lovely shade of mahogany to blend with any decor, & finished to a velvety smoothness with the finest piano lacquer. Gold liner, heavy metal turn clips to hold plate, complete with wire for hanging. If any of your prized plates have slight chips on the edges, these frames will cover the imperfections and show the plates to best advantage.

This Month's Cover

The prints from which amateur artists and students painted their pictures may have been professional examples, or they may have been amateurish efforts such as the Cambridge Print, pictured on this month's cover. Perhaps only the thousands of portraits of primitive quality that survive can be classed as painted from life and not copied. Story page 26.

MEMO FROM: Marcia

FROM OUR DEAR FRIENDS: Miss E. Maude Buchere: Please, PLEASE, don't ever print a single part of SPINNING WHEEL in "finer" print. After all most of us who have reached the collecting stage have also reached the "bi-focal" stage, and the finer print is quite out of the reading. (We promise . . though you'd be surprised how many collectors we know are still in the "no-glasses-but sun-glasses" stage—and those in pretty fancy frames!) . . . Mrs. Norma Samuel: To prove that next to National Geographic which I have had since 1917, I am preserving The SPINNING WHEEL as my second favorite, I herewith enclose my check for two binders for my 1951-1952 issues. . . . After he saw a piece in the March Spinning Wheel about pressed glass panes, Mr. C. A. Harris advertised some he'd been wondering what to do with for fifty years. Now he writes: I am having the most fun! You have some swell subscribers—all such nice folks that write to me. . . . Suld's Antiques: Recently went on a 4-day trip . . did a lot of visiting and a small amount of buying with fellow dealers in other states. Seems everyone has favorable things to say about SPINNING WHEEL, as a medium for advertising, as a collector's magazine, and most especially, for the friendly atmosphere you people have created. . . . Morrell B. Smith, (from an APO, Care of Postmaster address): I've read Spinning Wheel since you began publishing it . . I find that receiving it here in this part of the world is like a trip half way home. (Wish we could make it the rest of the way—we've been mailing to that APO number long enough) . . . Arlene Schleiger: Have been wanting to tell you that I have given a lecture on my Haviland at Rochester, N. Y. for the Rochester Antiquarian League. I am available for other engagements if you should ever get inquiries. (Program directors, please note.) . . . C. W. Baughn: I have enjoyed your informative articles and have bought with confidence from your advertisers. Have had no instance of misrepresented goods nor has any piece been damaged in shipment. Your 101 issue is a splendid start on the second hundred. . . . P. G. Frisbie: Your magazine is a source of much enjoyable reading and a "must" for me. . . . Birdie Crawford: Am so pleased with orders coming in . . sorry I did not start long ago advertising with you. . . . Mrs. Speros, East Erie Antiques: Doctor has advised me to retire from active work until next Spring. I'll miss my work very much, and I have made many friends thru your excellent magazine. I'll be back with you early next year with a brand new line of stock.

FOR ORGANIZING DEALERS: When the Maine Antiques Dealers Association organized in 1933, they set forth their purposes bravely . . and by adhering to them, they've built a strong and lasting organization . . . might be helpful for any newly organizing group to decide on their purposes and set them down in black and white . . . this is how the Maine dealers state theirs: "To maintain a trade association for those in the business of antiques; to procure better relations between dealers; to keep a standard of ethics and practices to inspire confidence of the public; to pledge its membership to the highest standards of service; to secure freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions; to acquire, preserve and disseminate valuable trade information; to seek in every legitimate way the advancement of its members, and with a due regard for the public welfare in every way to defend and preserve the principle of individual merchandising; and to do any and all things necessary, suitable, and proper for the accomplishment of the purposes herein set forth and for the social, educational, literary and scientific advancement of its membership." Merton Banks, Bangor is President; Helen Springer, Cumberland Center, Secretary.

ANOTHER EASTER EGG: Remember the Easter egg drawn by the lady in Blue Earth, Minn., on page 50, April Spinning Wheel? Mrs. Gretchen Straube Bien of Worcester, Mass., writes that she has such an egg in a hinged frame with flower brass finial. Inside, a small hinged perfume bottle is held in place by a removable brass plate in form of a leaf. She bought it at an auction a few summers ago, and the little faded note tucked inside, reads: "Perfume bottle, wedding gift to Angie Jordan MacLellan Kinney, June 1, 1868, Gardiner, Maine." This helps to date the piece as well as indicate the amount of travelling these little treasures did "in the olden days".

LET'S BE SICK IN 1847: The Medical Association of Great Falls (now Somersworth) N. H. set up some mighty enticing prices for surgery and medical care that year: "Visit in the village or ordinary medicines 50¢; advice in ordinary cases at office 25¢; night visit $1; extracting teeth 25¢; each additional tooth, same individual at same sitting 12½¢; obstetrics, single birth $4; twins $6; excision of tonsils $3." Credit Jim Mackie's column in The New England Homesteader for this nostalgic information.

IN FANCY PRINT: Will J. McKeown, the Indianapolis printer sent us a write up from the Indianapolis Star Sunday supplement about his collection of rare 19th Century type faces, one of the most valuable in the country . . . altogether he has over 100 different type faces . . . the oldest in Missal, copied from lettering in stained glass windows of early European cathedrals . . . he's keeping the Victorian era alive by using his collection, not just gloating over it . . . as well he might.

The Floral Magazine & Botanical Register

D. & C. Landreth, nurserymen and seedsmen of Philadelphia, issued this unique publication in 1832. Among their customers were some of the most important Gentlemen gardeners in America, and innumerable amateurs. In launching this publication, actually a super-catalog, the Landreths commissioned William Allbright to make the drawings, and had the plates done by lithography, exquisitely hand colored, after nature. Always an item of considerable interest to book collectors, as a complete volume, the plates from this quarto volume, measuring slightly over 8½ x 11¼ inches, have remained almost unknown to antiques collectors, perhaps the only evidence being the occasional discovery of a framed example, or a loose sheet in a portfolio of old prints. There are 31 plates, done by the following American Lithographers.

CHILDS & INMAN, Philadelphia, founded by Cephas G. Childs, 1823, and reorganized as Childs & Inman, 1831.
KENNEDY & LUCAS, Phila., est. 1829.
M. E. D. BROWN, Philadelphia, est. 1832.
J. F. & C. A. WATSON, Philadelphia. Peters, in "America on Stone" dates this firm as starting 1835. Since they are represented by plates in the volume here considered it is evident the firm was established by, or prior to, 1832.

The Journals of Collecting seem, somehow, to have failed, at least in part, to give the Landreth enterprise extensive mention. This, perhaps, has been due to the almost confidential knowledge of the publication and its 31 beautiful prints, every one of which is a subject for framing, and home decoration. They belong with almost any early American period of decoration even though falling just two years short of being officially antique. The prints, however, are older than any by N. Currier and much older than any by Currier & Ives. In fact, one of the Lithographers, M. E. D. Brown had, in his employ young N. Currier at about the time Brown did his flower plates for the Landreths.

In order that all collectors, everywhere, may have a complete record of all the plates in this series, with a record of all the text appearing on each and every print, this present list is published. It is definitive and documented. There are 31 plates. In Whitman Bennett's "Practical Guide to American 19th Century Color Plate Books" the total number of plates is given as 81. This is a typographical error. 31 plates is correct. The artist, William Allbright (sometimes spelled Albright) is not listed in Mantle Fielding's "Dictionary of American Painters, Sculptors and Engravers". But, that Mr. Allbright was an accomplished artist, is attested to by the plates themselves, every one of which Allbright did from nature and then on the stone. In the following list, title and other lettering is given first. Comment on color, et cetera, is printed in italics. These data do not appear on the proofs.

1. GORDONIA PUBESCENS. From nature by W. Allbright. From Childs & Inman Press. Green foliage, white flower.
2. CYDONIA JAPONICA. (Pyrus Japonica) From Nature and on Stone by W. Allbright. Kennedy & Lucas' Lithography. Green foliage, pink and Red blossoms and buds.

3. DAHLIA SUPERFLUA. From Nature by W. Allbright. From Childs & Inman's Press. Green foliage, Yellow and Red blooms.
4. CORRAEA SPECIOSA. From Kennedy & Lucas' Press. From Nature and On Stone by W. Allbright. Green and tinted foliage, pink to scarlet blossoms, buds having appearance of acorns.
5. PASSIFLORA PRINCEPS, COERULEA. From Nature by W. Allbright. From Childs & Inman's Press. Green foliage, buds and full blown passion flower in pink and white.
6. ERYTHRINA CRISTA-GALLI. From Nature by W. Allbright. From Childs & Inman's Lith Press. The flower of the cocks-comb, or coral tree. Green foliage and pink to red blossoms.
7. HYACINTHUS ORIENTALIS. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Browns Lith. The Garden hyacinth. Green foliage, blue, white and yellow flowering heads of blooms.

12. Rhododendron Maximum. M. E. D. Brown's Lith. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Green foliage and pink and white flower heads of the great American Rose Bay, or Rhododendron.
13. Citrus Decumana. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Green foliage, and yellow tinted examples of the Shaddock-Tree Fruit. Captain Shaddock, in the far Eastern trade, brought this fruit, now known as grapefruit, to the Barbados, prior to 1687. Incidentally, both the white and the red pulp varieties were known to the Landreths in 1832. The red variety is our "Texas Pink" grapefruit.
14. Camellia Japonica. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. M. E. D. Brown's Lith, Phila. Green foliage and two blooms, one white and one white and pink-red variegated. This is the plant found by George J. Kemell, or Camellus (hence the name, Camellia) akin to the tea plant of India, China, Ceylon and Japan. Sometimes called the Japan Rose.
15. Ardisia Crenulata. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Green foliage, white and purpled blossoms, some green, and two sprays of red berries.
16. Magnolia Obovata. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Pale green foliage and two pink buds, with one opening blossom. The Chinese purple magnolia.
17. Paeonia Moutan, v Rosea. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Pale green foliage and a magnificent full blown flower in violet-rose tints, with a bud.
18. Lonicera Flexuosa. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lithography. Green foliage and rose tinted buds and blossoms of the New Chinese Honeysuckle which, by 1850, seems to have been growing in every yard and garden in America.
19. Amaryllis Purpurea. On Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Green and violet tinted foliage, with gorgeous red blooms. This print is "landscape" shape, that is, oblong rather than upright in orientation.

Top, Citrus Decumana, or Shaddock-Orange (No. 13); center, Lonicera Flexuosa, or New Chinese Honeysuckle (No. 18); and bottom, Gardenia Florida var. grandiflora (No. 28). Three examples of the quality of prints in this portfolio.

20. Azalea Indica. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Green foliage, red-pink, pale violet and pink blossoms.
21. Gloxinia Speciosa. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Grey-green foliage and blue-gray tinted flowers.

23. Rhododendron Ponticim. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Green foliage, blue hued flowers with violet pink tendrils. The Pontic Rose Bay.
24. Bignonia Capensis. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. M. E. D. Brown's Lith. Green foliage and bright red flowers, of the Cape Bignonia.
25. Myrtus Tomentosa. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Phila. Downy green foliage, pink blossoms. The downy-leaved myrtle.
26. Alstroemeria Pelegrina. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Lith. by J. F. & C. A. Watson. Pale green foliage, the flowers toned white to deep rose-violet. The spotted flowered variety amaryllis.
27. Hyacinthus Orientalis. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Brown's Lith. Pale green foliage, pale blue, and white with rose tinted flowers.
28. Gardenia Florida Var. Grandiflora. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Lith by J. F. & C. A. Watson. Glossy green foliage and white flower.
29. Camellia Japonica. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Lith by J. F. & C. A. Watson. Brilliant green foliage and pink flower, with a pink bud.
30. Ornithogalum Aureum. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Lith. by J. F. & C. A. Watson. Green foliage and golden blossoms of the "golden star of Bethlehem".
31. Amaryllis Johnsoniensis. From Nature & on Stone by W. Allbright. Lith by J. F. & C. A. Watson. Deep green foliage and brilliant red flowers of Johnson's Amaryllis.

Research indicates that plates here listed, when offered for sale, have ranged in price from $5 to $25, framed and unframed. We have assumed from these data, an average price of $12.50, which would seem to be quite modest. Prophesying as to the future value of any item of antiquity is not properly within the province of any editorial writer or researcher. But in this case it would seem quite safe to predict that within a decade or two, prints from Landreth's "Floral Magazine" will be worth from twice to three times the average present day evaluation we have assumed.

One Collecting Opportunity
That is not yet Cornered . . .

Home Amusement Antiques

By Kay Harline

WHEN there are a lot of collectors seeking the same type and kind of object, that type and kind of object is cornered. Just as the old stock manipulators used to corner the market on wheat, hay, cotton, sugar, or what have you, with deliberate intent, so, too, many of us as collectors, without meaning to do so, corner the market for certain objects and items even though, in all truth, there are plenty of them to go around.

It works something like this: There is a vast accumulation of, let us say, pressed glass, or Currier & Ives prints, or the object of my quest — home amusement antiques — only a portion of which has reached the retail stage of disposal. Suddenly, everybody wants it, the available pieces are absorbed at an ever increasing advance in price, and so, when the next wave of examples is extracted from the pool, it is at substantially higher prices, and so on and on and on.

When I began collecting home amusement antiques they were objects which literally kicked around antiques shops. On the other hand,

[Please turn the page]

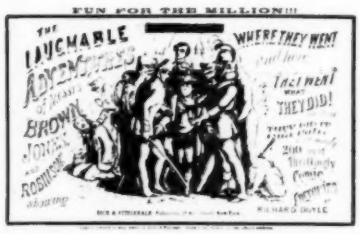
The Octoscope was a gadget with two large sheets of folding pictures, any one of which could be brought under a central glass.



These, believe it or not, are comic strip books of c. 1868, ancestors of today's craze for such as these.

Amusement Antique

they were objects that most certainly were not kicked around in antiquarian book stores. Yet, they were not books, and the antiques book seller who had them or acquired them was sometimes at a loss to know how to market them. They were objects which were allied to, but not precisely like, children's books. Spinning Wheel has already touched upon certain of the objects of home amusement, among them, paper dolls and zoetropes. But the field covered in this home amusement field is absolutely astonishing. Here is a listing of certain of the articles by categories and by their names. It has been kept to its present length because I do not want to bore anyone with an interminable list. Therefore, you can be quite sure that the following group offers only a small insight into the tremendous opportunities that exist in this field.

Paper dolls, paper doll furniture, childrens' drawing books, amusement books, educational games, arithmetical games, coloring books, caligraphic books, Bible games, geographical games, filoscopes, octoscopes, jigsaw puzzles, table games, three dimensional puzzles, tin and iron puzzles, pin-up games, periscopes, and dancing puppets number among the multitude of these types of collectibles.

One should be careful, shouldn't one? I mean about talking so freely about objects that are not yet "cornered" and letting my enthusiasm run away with me to the point where I might be making other people enthusiastic, and thus contributing to a

Sweet Elegancies of Silver

Top, a chatelaine bar with five eyelets. Removal of these, and fitting with clip provides a gorgeous item of costume jewelry. Bottom, a desk tray in the rococo style. Both are sterling silver.

MORE and more silver elegancies of other days are now entering the field of collecting interest. It was inevitable, once the attention of collectors was focused on the so-called Victorian era, that certain of the refinements in the baroque taste which characterized the last two decades of the Victorian period would one day be appreciated and collected. Already the art glass of this period has achieved high position, and literature on the subject. But no books on jewelry or silver of the era have paid attention to the utterly and completely baroque and rococo sterling that was made into luxury items of toilet ware, and other elegancies, for men and women. A silver funnel for the decanting of wine, a silver powder box, button hook, sealing wax holder, ladies' monacle, hat brush, whisk scissors and shears for every conceivable use. These were part and parcel of a parade which we can review here and picture, at least in part, so that he, who is interested, may know what was made and to what usages certain items found today were put originally.

Hair Brush, Hat Brush, Mirror, Comb, Puff Box, Creamer, Sugar Basin, Nail Polisher, Tray, Razor, ★Wine Funnel, Patch Box, Shoe Horn, Shoe Button, Nail File, Seal

[Please turn to page 32]

Elegancies in Baroque patterned sterling silver, left to right: Hair "dagger", or single pin; Ladies monocle; Violet holder (note the silver pin clasp under the bunch of violets); Baby teething stick of agate, silver mounted, with bells; Wine funnel; Sealing wax holder (the stick of wax was inserted in the handle); Darning egg (egg of agate or some other marble). All are UB Sterling, .925 parts fine. Dates range from 1880 to 1898.

An Accurate Scale of Sizes of Certain

19th Century Lamp Globes

WHAT is meant by a Solar lamp globe? What is its size? What is an Antique globe? A Monarch? An Orbit or a Princess? For lo, these past fifty years or more the facts have been forgotten although, as late as 1903, these terms were still in use by the buyers of lamps and globes at wholesale, by all manufacturers, and manufacturers' salesmen.

Innumerable requests indicate an ever growing interest in the meaning of names. So, let it be known that Solar, Antique, Monarch, Orbit, and Princess are names for globular lamp shade sizes. These are not names for patterns of decoration. "Antique" Dresden designated a shade size of the Dresden pattern. "Solar" Fleur-de-lis meant the "Solar" size in the Fleur-de-lis pattern.

Therefore this listing of the size designation of the names mentioned should serve as a guide without further explanation. It is correct and accurate, as it was originally used, in every part and particular.

Size Name	Dimensions
Solar	9½" high, 9¾" dia.
Antique	8" high, 8½" dia.
Monarch	7" high, 7½" dia.
Orbit	5¾" high, 6" dia.
Princess	4" high, 4½" dia.

All listed names apply to globular shades only. The shape and relative size of each globe are pictured.

BOOK REVIEWS

A Directory Within Reach of all Collectors . . . A Feature Review of . . .

Antique Furniture

by F. Lewis Hinckley

A Directory of Antique Furniture, by F. Lewis Hinckley, published by Crown, New York, 1953, $10.

THIS is, in our opinion, just about the biggest ten dollars worth of useful, usable, antique furniture information that any collector of this day can procure. This is a book for those who deal in, collect and care for antique furniture. It is amply fortified by text which explains and, perhaps, for the first time in recent years, gives a popular and readable history of style and style movement. Happily, Mr. Hinckley is qualified to speak with authority. He is one of the foremost furniture technologists of this era, an appraiser of international repute, and has been a consultant to the Metropolitan and other Museums. Factually, one might report the book as containing 1,103 large photographs of actual examples. But this would be to understate, and woefully, the importance of the pictorial demonstration which delineates, in large, easy to scan and study pictures, these important style sources by countries: Furniture related to the French School; Furniture related to the English School, Furniture based upon Paris designs; Furniture based upon London designs, Irish Furniture based upon English and Continental designs; American Furniture based upon English and Irish designs. This very listing should demonstrate the newness of approach to the study exemplified in Mr. Hinckley's opus.

Actually, there is more in each category than the table of contents reveals. For example, in the American Furniture section there are chairs, tables and chests deriving from Swedish, Swiss and Dutch designs. One error in this section deals with a caption describing a square leg with plinth as Marlborough and then asserting that the name appears as Marlbro' in early 19th century cost lists. The name, Marlbro, does appear,

Trestle type butterfly table, New England. Maple-wood; early 18th century. (Note: Originally believed to have been a Colonial invention, the so-called butterfly table derives from rudder support tables found in Lancashire and Yorkshire, Devon and Cornwall, England, from Elizabethan period.)

but it does NOT refer to the square leg, but to a heavily turned round leg! Equally disappointing in a minor way is to note that even in this well considered volume the Dowry chests of the 18th and early 19th century are called "dower." The dowry, if we may repeat, is the portion, or "dot," of a young lady about to be married. She kept her treasures in a chest, properly called a dowry chest. Dower, on the other hand, is a widow's legal right and portion . . . and not quite the same as a dowry! We fail also to find any representation of Austrian Succession, or Maria Theresa Furniture in this work which, perhaps, is because the style has not yet been impressed upon the consciousness of American Collectors. Barring these very few critical comments, none of which are vitally important, we wish that every collector of consequence could own and use this book. Certainly it should be in the reference library of every great newspaper, and above all be made required reading for television commentators who, in the main, are woefully lacking in basic knowledge about American antiques. Rectification of this lack is now available in the book here considered which, perhaps also for the first time in recent years, deals fairly with the quality furniture of Germany. Those who seek the style source of pioneer furniture so frequently designated as "Pennsylvania-German" will not find its prototypes in the masterpieces from Germany here displayed. And the display of Irish furniture (some of it undoubtedly made for absentee Irish landlords) will make any scion of the Emerald Isle feel quite proud and happy. Further, Mr. Hinckley's revelations as to the sources of certain items of furniture and decoration will cause blushes, if not red faces, among the fraternity of experts when, for example, they see certain mirrors made in Norway and Sweden which they have been attributing to Chinese sources.

Baltimore Furniture of superlative quality; Hepplewhite heart back mahogany chair, 18th century.

The pictures are a delight to the eye. Here is no collection of miniatures, related to postage stamps, but good, big, clear photographs of every piece. The captions give additional data on woods, styles, and location of the pieces. The admirably compressed history in the forepart of the book extends only from page 7 to page 34. Then, the new paging, from 1 to 355, is all pictures with captions; the richest and most varied display available today in any American book on antiques. Here is a work by a man of long years of experience—an expert before 1916!—which is his heritage to we who collect today. It is a work for the amateur to use, to his everlasting profit; a book for the expert to use as a refresher course; a book for quick reference. Spinning Wheel bestows upon this one volume work a five star rating. For the general collector, this is the best book now available for a really broad view of the origins, sources, and paternity of the antique furniture now dealt in generally and collected from coast to coast by enthusiasts of every economic level.

Lace and Lace Making, by Marian Powys. Charles T. Branford Company, 1953. $7.50.

John Cowper Powys, in his foreword to this work designates lace as unique, (sui generis, is his phrase) like nothing else made by man or woman. Millions of people in every age, of every degree, have found it so. Patrician and peasant alike took pride and pleasure in their lace, albeit the cause of the emotion was not the same kind and quality of lace.

In this volume Miss Powys tells the story of laces by name and accompanies each named style or type and kind with study specimens illustrating the characteristics that earn for the lace its name. Thus the book is a dictionary of lace terms, with each kind illustrated, and with lavish examples of various categories of usage, as Ecclesiastical Lace, Personal Adornment Lace, Lace in Decoration, Bed Lace, Bridal Lace and so on. There are chapters giving wise advice in Lace Collecting, on Lace making and Lace mending.

The author is wholly and completely competent for the task she has set herself; that of creating an interesting, popular book about lace. She has studied at the Yeovil School of Art, and in other centers of learning in the Netherlands, Belgium, France, and Venice. In 1950 she became lace consultant to the Metropolitan Museum.

In this volume 142, all different, specimens of lace are illustrated and identified. 100 additional large pictures display lace work of ancient, traditional and exceptional quality; art in gossamer form.

The world of collecting has long needed this type of altogether satisfying book about lace. Hundreds of occasional collectors have regretted the scarcity of popular, understandable literature about lace. Here is a book that answers every need of the amateur, and which, we suspect, will tell a great many experts certain things they have forgotten and perhaps even some facets about lace they had never known. A five star rating in the world of books on antiques is the deserved place for this volume.—Rita McLaughlin.

Concerning the breadth and scope of American Graphic Arts of Pioneer Quality, and . . .

Four Federalists of 1800

By Carl W. Drepperd

THE Old Print Shop Portfolio, May 1953, carries this editorial commentary: "To the best of our knowledge no one has ever collected old American prints of primitive character for the sake of that characteristic." Somehow, I feel, that somewhere, somebody must have responded to the suggestions made in Spinning Wheel to investigate and collect the primitive quality lithographic views found in old County Atlases. One wishes such party, or parties, would come forward, and be known. The fascinating pursuit of quaint, curious, amateurish and pioneer quality prints should not be held confidential. There are enough examples to suffice for a little army of collectors. I, for one, cannot qualify as a collector but I have laid away a few.

The Old Print Shop's comment was sparked by their discovery of a hitherto unrecorded hand colored lithographic view of Cambridge, Maryland, (this month's cover) from a drawing by B. K. Hodges, c. 1825. Modestly priced at $65, this 9¼ x 10¼ inch item of unique status was most likely sold within a few hours. However, in designating this item as unique I wish to go on record as saying I mean unique subjectively; in respect of the place, the recorded artist, the kind of print (lithograph) and the fact it is hand colored. Having made that clear, let it serve as a preliminary to this affirmation of belief: In my opinion there are more crude, amateurish, quaint, curious and pioneer type prints still surviving than paintings falling within the same category. The prints might, conceivably, fall short in terms of subjective listing, but objectively, while paintings are solo examples of work, prints were issued at least by the hundred, generally by the thousands and sometimes by the hundred thousands.

Further, it is no longer a secret, even though evaded by some experts, that many of the genre and landscape paintings now called primitive, and once worshipped as "original, spontaneous efforts at self expression" are just so many copies, painted from early prints. The prints from which amateur artists and students painted their pictures may have been professional examples, or, they may have been amateurish efforts such as the Cambridge print, pictured, or the print of Lake Emily. Perhaps only the thousands of portraits of primitive quality that survive can be classed as painted from the life and not copied. But even that is not true of the many portraits of Washington, and other notables; these were copied on a wholesale basis, from originals by accomplished artists, some of whom copied their own originals, or hired hack copyists to do the work, in order to supply the demand for such portraits.

Of crudities in the category of prints, wood-cuts, engravings, and lithographs, the following are historic examples: (1) Richard Mather, a 17th century wood-cut by John Foster; (2) Boston Massacre, engraving by Paul Revere; (3) Correct View of The Late Battle at Charlestown, engraving by Robert Aitken; (4) The Devil and General Arnold, a wood-cut published by Francis Bailey, and (5) Battle of New Orleans, engraving by Francisco Scaki.

Our early poster art is rich in examples of crude wood-cut illustration. The chief users of such art were artisans and tradesmen who had goods and services for sale, and the entrepreneurs of entertainment; the proprietors of museums, educational exhibits, singers, musicians and troupes of players, acrobats, and menageries. Often the very last posters printed for the purpose of giving publicity to such clients came from a printer with whom the plate, or woodcut, was left. And then, fifty, seventy-five or a hundred or more years later, unless the printer's collection of old cuts was burned, the printing block may turn up. This is not unusual because one of the major assets of a printing establishment, after its presses, was its collection of woodcut illustrations. These were saleable to other, and succeeding, printers. The great era of destruction of old woodcuts was the age which marked the beginning of photo-mechanical zinc engravings.

Perhaps one of the most unusual wood blocks once used to make a print, or poster, is now owned by Ignatius M. Wiese of the Silvermine Tavern and Antiques Shop, Silvermine, Connecticut. It is a large block, measuring 15 x 16 inches. It is pine, and the picture it prints stands out from delightfully amateurish carving and whittling. It depicts four gentlemen in Republican, or Federalist costume: tailed coats, ruffled stocks, long waistcoats, gartered knee breeches, long hose and buckle shoes. The date may be as early as 1790; as late as 1810. So, our estimate is a splitting of the difference, or an averaging; let us call it 1800. What does it picture? Well, it may be a quartet of singers. It may be a foursome of talented entertainers who read, recited, sang, whistled and/or orated. It may be the advertising illustration of a tailor or haberdasher; a box label, or a picture to embellish a sheet of wrapping paper. Surely it is American pioneer graphic art and that is what makes it a highly desirable item.

The prints here considered are destined, beyond question, to be antiques of tomorrow; meaning, of course, they are objects destined for assiduous collecting on the part of many people. The objects are antique now. They just haven't as yet caught the eye of the ever growing army of new collectors.

That means we all have opportunity

Often mistaken for Ivory, This is

MacIntyre

An Ivory China from the Washington Works, Burslem, England, in the 1850s

THANKS to the combined finding, buying, and researching of Joan Morris of White Plains, George McKearin of Hoosick Falls, and our own consultant, Carl Drepperd, this story derives from Miss Morris finding a pair of pepper shakers which looked like ivory, the buying of one each by the two gentlemen named, and the noting of a mark on one which seemed to read MAGINTY. Then it was noted an RE was also there, obscured by the Registry Mark indicating making in 1851. A strong glass revealed the name in full, not Maginty or Macinty, but Macintyre. From there on, research was easy.

James Macintyre joined with W. S. Kennedy of Washington Pottery, Burslem, where, from 1838, artists' palettes and other specialties had been made. Macintyre, in 1850 began the development of what was called "Ivory China" some of which was lathe turned and was often used in place of ivory. One of the lathe turned specialties was a series of pepper and salt shakers with screw-bottoms, after the manner of the now fantastically rare screw-bottom pill and patch boxes. The screw and top are of the ceramic ware, so hard and fine that it engages tightly and thus provides a pottery box without metal, or wood, or cork . . . an everlastingly safe material.

Now, all readers of Spinning Wheel can authenticate any such antiquities that come their way . . . and some of this unique ivory ware is now coming to the USA from English Collections!

Old Magazines
Can be Valuable!

WHEN mulling over any pile of old Magazines in anticipation of either disposal, or purchase, it pays to examine each item, if not minutely, at least with an educated eye. Here is an example. The reason for the possible present, and future, value of this item is right on the cover. That is one of the first Gibson Girl pictures of record. The drawing is signed by the scrawl, C. D. Gibson which, just five years later was known to more Americans, and the work of the artist admired by more Americans, than perhaps any other artist of our time, not excepting Harrison Fisher, Coles Phillips, Bradshaw Crandall and Howard Chandler Christy. Gibson made the girl, the American Girl, famous. All the other artists had the Gibson audiences to draw upon. Now that Gibson Girl plates and other memorials of this artist have become collectors items we venture to predict not less than 100 and perhaps 1000 collectors will want this number, May 1893, of the Ladies Home Journal as a part of their Gibson collection.

It was in 1938 that a famous Library paid $2,500 for a collection of book and magazine illustrations, all published items, not a bit of it original art, from drawings by Howard Pyle. Admittedly, the collection was so nearly complete, representing all of Pyle's published works, that completion was easy. Gibson's work may well fall within that same pattern. The most recent definition of "capitalist" we have run across is this: "A Person willing to wait for pay, and profit". That makes every antiques collector a capitalist — and is perhaps why the socialists say that antiques collecting is anti-social! But here is news of an artist whose work was wholly within our social scene . . and how he did picture it.

PAPER DOLLS DELUXE

ONE thing it is well to learn early, if one intends to appraise any sector of collecting and be guided thereby, is that all common, or garden variety of objects, all pioneer type objects, must have had prototypes. In almost every instance, the prototypes will lead us to the deluxe representation of the objects, categorically. Pewter for example, must inevitably lead the researcher to either silver, or to ceramic wares because pewter was the imitative, not the prototype substance. Pioneer furniture and primitive furniture can be traced to its superior ancestors. And so it is with all forms of toys, including even paper dolls.

There are collectors of what were the cheap paper dolls of America who as yet do not know how far the cheap ones are from their superior cousins. And then, when the superior and even deluxe relations are found to exist, some collectors fail to ask the very pertinent question "Are these the ultimate?" In turn they fail to realize that, at one time, the paper doll was the darling toy of very sophisticated grown-ups of the Court of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette.

The paper dolls here pictured are of the very finest made in the 1850's. There are two master dolls of cardboard, and six different costumes for each doll. One costume for each portrays the American lady with a child. Since these dolls and their costumes constitute the deluxe representation of paper dolls of a century ago, we display here the entire wardrobe.

In surveying this collection of "la mode toilettes variees", these data should be made a part of the story. (1) The dolls are 11" tall. (2) They are lithographed and hand colored. (3) All costumes are in the form of envelopes, front and back pasted together along the edges and opened only at bottom and at neck line. The doll forms are slipped in and out of the garments; the garments are not just "hung on". (4) All costumes are gorgeously hand colored.

Who made this series of paper dolls? The original container, preserved in full, saith not. But this much we know, or can know: it was made in France. It has all the earmarks. The title, fully emphasizing that the doll is for the American market, and of the American lady, is repeated in French, in Italian, in Dutch, and in German. Here we have quality paper dollery. This is the type of paper doll sold by the ultra-ultra fancy stores of the big cities; paper dolls for the children of the well-to-do. We suspect the ensemble cost at least a dollar a century ago. Maybe two dollars. What price glory now? And where does one find such things today?

These were purchased at Dawson's Bookshop, Los Angeles, California. Somehow, paper dolls gravitate to antiquarian book stores rather than to antiques shops. These items have been a fancy and stationer's store item for many years, so maybe they feel more at home in old bookshops. It is also true that paper dolls and childrens' books are so closely related that few if any shops handling one item are without the other, if they can get them. Not long ago when a rare book dealer expressed a desire to advertise in Spinning Wheel and was asked what items he wished to sell, he exclaimed, "Sell? I want to buy. I have no trouble at all selling paper dolls and childrens' books. My trouble is finding them!"

You may, should you want to find a set of paper dolls such as these, wait a year or two before finding them. Or you may find them tomorrow. But whatever your luck in that respect, you now know that paper dolls did reach heights of elegance to such an extent that some sets of them, as those shown here, originally cost more than a pair of conventional, ordinary, three dimensional play dolls!

Cutter, ★ Sealing Wax Holder, ★ Ladies' Monacle, Bottle Cork, Folding Comb, Scissors and Shears, Key Tag, ★ Menthol Lipstick Case, Key Ring, Letter File, ★ Violet Holder, ★ Veil Clip, Chewing Gum Case, Lorgnette, Bicycle Plate, ★ Darning Egg, ★ Teething Stick with Bells, Hat Pins, ★ Hair Daggers, Curling Iron Lamp, Smelling Salts Bottles, and Bouquet Holders.

This is only a beginning and not a definitive listing of the elegancies made of sterling silver (.925 fine) produced from the 1870's to around 1900!

There is this fact to be taken into consideration by all who collect, or who will collect, these items: the antiques shop price is generally based upon the value of the silver in the object, at the rate of approximately $1.00 per ounce. It would be impossible for any manufacturer of sterling silver to duplicate these articles today and sell them at retail competitively with the early goods, at today's antiques shops prices! The cost of making the dies, and of the hand chasing and modeling involved, would make the items prohibitive in price either as new goods or as reproductions.

Top, a hat mark for gentlemen; it was affixed to the inner band. Downward: Key tag, menthol lipstick holder; dog whistles; glove hook, (used in buttoning the long gloves of the era) and a veil clip.

In spite of the fact that many people frown upon the conversion of old items into new, we have seen some of the most beautiful clips and other pieces of modern jewelry made from the lids of 19th century sterling silver patch boxes. Any capable jeweler can aid collectors in such conversions.

There was, in 1885, a sterling silver object known as a pen extractor. It is much to be doubted if any individual today wants a pen extractor on his desk for the simple reason that very few people are using old fashioned steel pens, in holders, for their correspondence. But the pen extractor can be put to other uses. Conversely, certain early hat marks, belt pins, etc., need almost no conversion to make them into clips or earrings. The covers for a desk stamp book of sterling silver make perfectly delightful clips while a bicycle plate of sterling silver can be attached to a wrist watch band and made a most imposing piece of costume jewelry—a bracelet!

This, primarily, is a picture story so let the pictures tell the rest of the story. You can find such items today. Be sure they are marked sterling. Even though the original purpose of the object is no longer indicated in this day and age, the early silver work is, or will be, a collector's item!

Four Federalists of 1880

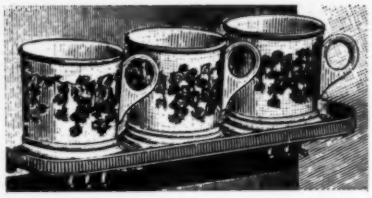
here and now to enter a coming vogue on its ground floor. We can even enjoy original wood blocks as decorative items if we but take a tip from the connoisseurs who have collected the wood engravings of great masters, such as Durer. They have the background (the cut-away parts of a woodcut or wood engraving) filled with fine white pigment ground in water soluble mastic. Thus the block shows its printing surface en silhouette, precisely as it would print. Framed, the block makes an unique wall piece.



No, not Shaving Mugs, but Hot Soda Water Mugs

Take a good look at these pretty mugs. For years people have been thinking of them as shaving mugs. They're the same size, they're decorated and of course not a few collectors have converted them to mugs for serving today's refreshments.

The firm of Crandall & Godley has set us straight in the matter. These are not shaving mugs, but mugs for a beverage which few, if any of today's collectors have ever heard . . . . hot soda water. Yet this was a rage in the 1880's. Most soda fountains had heaters in which charged water was made as hot as water for tea. Only this hot water was ready for flavoring with coffee syrup, or ginger, chocolate or lemon. They tell us that thousands of fountains had hot soda water taps, offered these four flavors, and served it in these mugs. Such documentation should require no further words. We are most grateful to Crandall & Godley for this information that we hereby pass on to collectors and dealers for their edification and, shall we say . . . . amusement?

Amusement Antiques

cornering of the very market in which I am most interested. Yes, I know there are other collectors who are very quietly building up imposing accumulations of this material. One of them, a gentleman of high standards, is actually creating a home amusement museum. There may be several thousand collectors of childrens' books who have entered this field. But here is the secret: every home in America, in every year of the Colonial and Federal periods, and right down to the turn of this present century, had anywhere from one to several dozen objects of home amusement. Some were home made, some were professionally made, some were commercially made in tremendous quantities, but every one dating before 1900 is now an antique of significance and some of them are utterly fantastic. The only thing I can promise you is this; if you collect material of this kind you will never grow old. You will be renewing your youth every day, playing with the home amusement toys, games and devices of America's past.

How Others Use Their Antiques

Pantry on a Christmas Card

MRS. Neal Dow Howard of Evanston, Illinois, hesitated before sending us the picture of her pantry. Was it actually "unique" to use her antiques for the exact purpose they were intended? Because Spinning Wheel feels one of the greatest enjoyments of owning antiques is to use them and to do so when possible for their original purpose—a simple fact that sometimes eludes the seeker for the unusual—we are giving you this peek into Mrs. Howard's pantry.

The Tea Leaf is kept convenient for use on the kitchen table; the two molds are ready to be filled with puddings or aspics; beans are baked in the iron pot. The wooden bowl doubles for salad or bread-making; and the coffee grinder, which will grind coffee, holds keys, rings and little oddments in its convenient drawer. The two trivets serve as racks for roaster and teapot stands. The churn makes butter and the butter mold shapes it attractively.

Perhaps the truly "unique" use to which Mrs. Howard has put her pantry is by choosing it to illustrate her Christmas card, for such a greeting, so full of personality is truly one-of-a-kind. The peppermint sticks in the glass cookie jar, the tempting roast turkey and the fat candle on the lower shelf, all speak of holiday festivities. No other pantry anywhere—no other card—will exactly duplicate it. More and more collectors are featuring their treasures on Christmas cards, and somehow it's these personalized picture greetings—of homes, or people, or collections—that are treasured long after the Christmas season is past.

TELL US* to what unique use you have put YOUR antiques. $10 will be paid for every story with illustration that is published. Do not send pictures that have appeared elsewhere. Send your idea and at least one 8x10" black and white picture of professional quality to: "How Others Use Their Antiques," c/o Spinning Wheel, Taneytown, Md. Entries cannot be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed, stamped envelope.

How Others Use Their Antiques

Pantry on a Christmas Card

MRS. Neal Dow Howard of Evanston, Illinois, hesitated before sending us the picture of her pantry. Was it actually "unique" to use her antiques for the exact purpose they were intended? Because Spinning Wheel feels one of the greatest enjoyments of owning antiques is to use them and to do so when possible for their original purpose—a simple fact that sometimes eludes the seeker for the unusual—we are giving you this peek into Mrs. Howard's pantry.

The Tea Leaf is kept convenient for use on the kitchen table; the two molds are ready to be filled with puddings or aspics; beans are baked in the iron pot. The wooden bowl doubles for salad or bread-making; and the coffee grinder, which will grind coffee, holds keys, rings and little oddments in its convenient drawer. The two trivets serve as racks for roaster and teapot stands. The churn makes butter and the butter mold shapes it attractively.

Perhaps the truly "unique" use to which Mrs. Howard has put her pantry is by choosing it to illustrate her Christmas card, for such a greeting, so full of personality is truly one-of-a-kind. The peppermint sticks in the glass cookie jar, the tempting roast turkey and the fat candle on the lower shelf, all speak of holiday festivities. No other pantry anywhere—no other card—will exactly duplicate it. More and more collectors are featuring their treasures on Christmas cards, and somehow it's these personalized picture greetings—of homes, or people, or collections—that are treasured long after the Christmas season is past.

TELL US* to what unique use you have put YOUR antiques. $10 will be paid for every story with illustration that is published. Do not send pictures that have appeared elsewhere. Send your idea and at least one 8x10" black and white picture of professional quality to: "How Others Use Their Antiques," c/o Spinning Wheel, Taneytown, Md. Entries cannot be returned unless accompanied by self-addressed, stamped envelope.

At the Towle Silversmiths Exhibition Gallery, Newburyport, Massachusetts, on display from March 23 through April 4, 1953. Center: silver tankard by John Burt, 1691-1745, engraved "Second Presbyterian Church, Newburyport". Either side, a pair of cans by Jacob Hurd, 1702-1758, the one at right engraved with same legend as the tankard. These items are lent by G. Warren Walker Jr., of Beverly, Massachusetts. It is interesting to note that Church Antiques were among the first collectors items. Church silver and pewter too, have been collected since the mid-19th century.

Towle Silver Company's Historic Silver Exhibit

When, in 1685, William Moulton, of Newbury, Massachusetts, opened his silversmithing shop, none of his contemporaries would have predicted that a business, deriving from that shop, would be actively engaged in making sterling silver exclusively, in the year 1953. But such is the case. Towle, world's largest manufacturers of sterling silver exclusively, employing 650 people in an ivy covered building in Newburyport, is now exhibiting examples of solid silver by early American silversmiths.

This is a loan exhibition but, it is a step in the direction Spinning Wheel has been advocating . . . that American manufacturers collect and display the antiques of their business categorically. It is not necessary to have ancient lineage to collect and display the antiques of a business, any more than it is necessary to be a D.A.R, a Son of the Revolution, a Colonial Dame, or what, in order for an individual to collect antiques.

We congratulate the Towle Silver Company on the Exhibit. We suggest more definitive data sheets, in the philosophy of Towle's earlier — and now almost rare — books on the styles and patterns of America.
